—At the American horse show recently held, our citizen, Hon. L. W. Mitchell, not only judged in the usual classes as we have heretofore stated, but he was chosen the individual judge of "heavy" and "light hunters." He was also the individual judge when the world's record on high jumps was twice broken. Honors were truly showered upon our recently elected Representative to the General Assembly as we see that he was elected president of the American Shetland Pony Club.

—The Paw Paw Herald takes advantage of some little feeling against Dixon, growing out of the election contest to start a "County Seat" contest, an issue which has heretofore caused much trouble in this as well as other counties. We hope that the editor, who is a Democrat, is not himself provoked on account of the fact that the Republicans of Dixon did not at the recent election stick to the straight ticket; for truly he is one of those who will reap the benefit of the bolt. We did not know that the question of a new court house is a matter of very great anxiety among the voters nor that it had been talked about. However, here is what the Herald says, and we give it for what it is worth; and it is not entirely worthless in the line of unjust prejudice:

At every election the question is raised by voters, Is there any prospect of building a new court house? At present no. But before many years pass away a new court house will have to be built at the expense of the county and Dixon will use every tactic in their power to have an elegant structure raised. Every voter in the county knows that Dixon is fast assuming controll of every county election and can soon do as they please. The fact is, that now is the time to talk about a court house while the people who have to pay the taxes have something to say about the matter, and we are sure that should the question of building a court house at Dixon or Amboy be voted upon, that Amboy would receive the house. That is the place for it as it is centrally located and within reach of every part of the county far more conveniently than Dixon, and if Amboy is amind to wake up and hustle it can secure the sight. The people don't want a court house located where it can be, and is, run by a ring, and they will stand by Amboy, solid.

After being relieved of the above we hope the editor feels better.

—To Wm. D. Barge we are indebted for a look at a book, though not very old, is what may be considered in these times of rapid progress ancient history, containing as it does the first sketch or description of the now great city of Chicago, printed in the form of what may be termed a history. Mr. Barge has a sort of hankering after early history, or " quaint and forgotten lore" that we can appreciate fully and we gladly make the following extract from "A Gazetteer of Illinois" printed in 1834:

"Chicago, the seat of justice for Cook county, is situated on a river or bay of the same name, at the junction of North and South branches, and from one half mile to a mile from lake Michigan. The town is beautifully situated on level ground, but sufficiently elevated above the highest floods, and on both sides of the river.

It contains three houses for public worship, an academy, an infant and other schools, twenty-five or thirty stores, many of them doing a large business, several taverns, mechanics of various kinds, a printing office which publishes the "Chicago Democrat," and ten or twelve hundred inhabitants.

Its growth, even for western towns, has been unusually rapid, two years since it contained five stores and about two hundred and fifty inhabitants.

THE H. H. PERRY PROPERTY IN WEST DIXON.
 There are parts of four blocks in this property, with a good double house and a barn, in the most desirable part of Dixon for investment.

We offer this property as a whole or in quantities to suit purchasers. The indications are that at the coming session of congress an additional appropriation will be passed for the Hennepin Canal and that work will begin on it here in the spring.

This fact together with the needs of the new shoe factory makes this property very valuable. Now is the time to obtain bargains.

REAL ESTATE.

If any man tells you that property in Dixon will ever be cheaper than now set him down as a "croaker."

Many new houses will be needed and must be built next season to supply the demand. Take a look about the city and you will observe that real desirable lots within easy distance of the business center of the city are becoming scarce. Money invested in such property now will most assuredly pay a good profit.

I have in my hands for sale all of the unsold lots at "HIGHLAND PARK." Go and look it over and note the improvements going on. HIGHLAND PARK looks better every time you see it.

All of "BELLEVIEW" nearest the college, shoe factory and business center. Property in all parts of the city including many houses and some business property. If you want to either buy or sell call and see me.

C. H. HUGHES.

BELLEVIEW!

The location of this addition is most desirable to those who desire to reside near the great manufacturing institution on the South Side; also the College, being only about ten minutes walk from either.

Few people know anything definite about distances in their own town or city outside of their several routes from home to office, store or shop. Let us give you a few points in Dixon. From the Post Office to the College by the nearest traveled route is about 3600, to the Shoe Factory 3600 feet, and to the Grand Detour Plow Factory 4950 feet. From "Bellevue" to College 2500, to the Shoe Factory 3100 feet, to the Grand Detour Factory 3600 feet. "Bellevue" is within easy reach of some of the great industries of our city and will be still nearer to those of the future. A few good lots are still for sale at $200, each.

The site commands a splendid view in every direction, soil dry and most suitable for residences, drainage excellent, and two of the great highways leading to the City, pass the grounds. Values are sure to advance in the near future, and those wishing homes will make no mistake in investing on these lots.

ENOUGH OF HONOR.

Ohio's "Old Roman" Has Done With Public Service.

BANQUET TO THE OLD STATESMAN.

His Renunciation of Public Life Received with a Tremendous Demonstration—The Judge's Patriotic Response to the Toast of "Our Guest"—Ex-President Cleveland's Warm Words of Praise and Comments on the National Issues—Gen.
Ewing Outlines His View of What the Democratic Policy Should Be.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 14.—Yesterday marked the seventy-seventh anniversary of the birthday of Allen G. Thurman, the "Old Roman" of Ohio democracy, and the Democrats of the nation made the occasion one to do homage to their distinguished mentor. From early morning every incoming train brought to the city a contingent of prominent Democrats

ALLEN G. THURMAN, from abroad, and all day Judge Thurman was the recipient of congratulatory calls.
Ex-President Cleveland came in on an early train and at once proceeded to the executive mansion. An hour later United States Senator Calvin S. Brice arrived at the mansion and the ex-president and himself made an early forenoon call on the distinguished Ohioan.

A Chat with the Old Statesman.
The sunshine of the pleasant autumn seemed to add vigor to the frame of the Old Roman, who, as he shook the hand of Cleveland so warmly extended in congratulation, assured his caller that he had not felt so well in many months, and that he hoped still to weather a few more years.

"But," said he, "I have lived long enough to find myself more than appreciated by the many kind friends who have remembered me on this day, and no years could aid to the warmth of the congratulations which they have showered upon me."

Mr. Cleveland assured the "Old Roman" that the greetings of the day, which came from all quarters of the country, some extended in person, others by letters, and hundreds by wire, were but the spontaneous expression of a grateful people toward one whose proud and unswerving career had won for him alike the veneration of his party and the admiration of the nation.

Many Happy Returns of the Day.
"We hope, Judge," said Mr. Cleveland, "that you may yet be spared many years of usefulness to see the fullest fruits of your doctrines and your teachings."

Mr. Thurman quietly spent the day at his residence surrounded by his family.
There was some talk of the visiting clubs tendering him an impromptu reception, but the local committee decided that in view of his advanced age and enfeebled condition it would be better to allow him to avoid excitement and to rest until the evening, and so the proposal was abandoned.
Letters of regret were received from Vice President Morton and Governor-Elect Patterson, of Pennsylvania.

Reception to Grover Cleveland.
The ex-president was tendered a reception at 11 a. m. at the governor's office, where Mr. Cleveland met the many distinguished representatives of that party which acknowledged him as leader. During the reception the firing of cannon welcomed Mr. Cleveland to the state of Ohio.
The clamorous crowd which assembled in the building would not depart without personally greeting the ex-president, and a line was formed, and as the multitude ebbed slowly through Mr. Cleveland shook hands with his admirers. By his side stood Governor Campbell, who had ventured out for the first time during the day, Congressman Outhwaite, Hon. Joseph E. McDonald of Indiana, and several other Democrats of national celebrity.

Prominent Democrats Present.
Among the prominent Democrats who came to the city to attend the celebration were Congressman Springer, of Illinois; Mansur, of Missouri; Outhwaite, of Ohio; ex-Commissioner of Agriculture Coleman, of Missouri; Governor-Elect Boyd, of Nebraska; President Robert J. Smith of the Iroquois club, Chicago, and Congressmen Durbin and McGinnis, of Illinois. Besides these there were hundreds of other Democrats from this and neighboring states who came individually or in clubs to pay tribute of respect to the aged statesman.

THE EVENT OF THE DAY.

Banquet at Which the Old Roman Declares His Retirement.

The great event, and the feature that was looked forward to with most interest, was the banquet. It was a magnificent affair, and nothing like it had ever before been attempted in the Buckeye state.
The Fourteenth Regiment army had been transformed into a fairy land. The rafters of the ceiling and its whitewashed walls were hidden from view by thousands of yards of bright, colored bunting and silken flags and banners innumerable. Around the floor, rising tier above tier, were the choicest products of the hot-house, while above all towered mastiff palms and fragrant exotics. The orchestra was hidden from view in a mass of foliage, in turn surrounded with a curtain of silk. At the southern end of the hall, upon a platform beaped with palms and roses in bloom, were crayon portrait statues of President Cleveland and the special guest of the evening.
Cheers for the "Old Roman."

The table of honor rested upon a platform running half the length of the hall.
Longitudinal with this there were sixteen tables, each with accommodation for eighty guests seated vis-a-vis. Every chair had its occupant while there were hundreds more, who finding it impossible to gain a place upon the main floor, were content to view the proceedings from the gallery. It was shortly after 8 o'clock when the cheering from the large crowd which had gathered on the outside announced the arrival of the distinguished guests, and when the ex-senator, arm in arm with President John J. Lentz, of the Thurman club, appeared upon the scene closely followed by ex-President Cleveland and Senator Joseph McDonald, the cheering was hearty and prolonged.

Arrangement of the Guests.
Mr. Thurman sat on the right of the president, his son Allan W., being next to him, and then in succession Senator McDonald, Don M. Dickinson, W. C. P.
Breckinridge, Gen. Thomas Ewing, Governor Boyd. To the left of the chair were seated Grover Cleveland, Gen. R. A. Harrison and Bishop John A. Watterson, Daniel Lamont and Governor Jackson.
Nearly two hours were occupied in discussing the elaborate menu. It was after 10 o'clock when President Lentz rapped for order and in a few well-chosen words proposed the toast of "Our Guest." Mr.
Thurman, on rising to respond, was greeted with uproarious applause, which lasted several minutes.

Judge Thurman's Response.
Silence having been restored Mr. Thurman spoke as follows: I am not here to-night to make an elaborate speech. I am here to express in a few sentences my heartfelt appreciation of the honor you have kindly seen fit to do me; to thank my wife and my neighbors, my fellow-citizens of Ohio and the distinguished gentlemen from other states for their mark of friendship and esteem. I am here at the age of 77 to repeat my testimony so often given, of my confidence in the beneficent effects of free institutions and my firm belief of their duration on this continent, and their gradual, but certain, extension over other and larger portions of the globe. I hope that it is not presumptuous in me to say that I think that I have some of the necessary qualifications of a witness on this subject.

The Experience of a Life.
Short as my life has been, in comparison with the lives of nations, it has been long enough for me to see my native land, under free institutions, increase in population more than seven fold, in wealth, in a far, very far, greater degree in extent of territory more than double its area. In the general well-being and prosperity of its people and in their educational advantages and religious privileges without a rival in the world, while the magnificent works of internal improvement, its wonderful agriculture, its great mines and manufactures and its marvelous means of communication, the creations of science and skill, surpass anything before known by the human race.

Republican Ideas Victorious.
And in these same seventy-seven years the constitution of nearly every government in Europe has been ameliorated by the introduction of more liberal principles. Central and South America have become a congress of republics; Canada and Australia are substantially republican without the name, and even in the far east oriental Japan becomes more free and liberal with every revolving year.
And more marvelous light yet seems to be breaking over benighted Africa, and men of philosophic disposition are predicting, without exciting ridicule, her redemption from her barbaric sleep of centuries. In a word, freedom seems to be gradually conquering the globe, and proud thought for us, the Polar star of the navigator is our own republic of the United States.

Seventy-One Years an Ohio Citizen.
What I have said may seem to some like extravagant optimism; if so, I have only to reply that I have always preferred optimism to pessimism, and common sense, both, and I don't think that in what I have said I have departed from the teachings of my guide.
My friends, it is seventy-one years since, at 6 years of age, I became a citizen of Ohio, and I have been one of her citizens from that day to this, and will no doubt remain one of her people until I shall be laid in my final resting place in earth under her soil. It would be the performance of a grateful duty on my part to speak of the uniform kindness that I have received from boyhood to old age, from the people of this state, of the honors they have conferred upon me beyond my deserts, of

The Numerous and Dear Friends I have made, and whose attachment can never be forgotten for a moment, or remembered without emotion, of the distinguished men of Ohio whom I have seen and with many of whom I was intimately acquainted, and of the just pride with which I have witnessed the wonderful growth of the state until her name is known and commands respect throughout the whole civilized world. But Ohio is the state upon which you will hear from your distinguished governor, and no one is better qualified to do justice to it than he, I shall therefore confine myself to a few personal reminis-cences, which, if they serve no other purpose, will prove to you that it is an old, old man whom you honor so highly to-night.

Men Whom He Has Known.
The speaker went on to say that he had seen and talked with the first governor of the state, Edward Tiffin; that he had known its first United States senator, Thomas Worthington; that he had been private secretary to Governor Lucas, had seen and spoken to Gen. William Henry Harrison, and had been intimately acquainted with many other illustrious Ohioans now dead and gone. He paid an eloquent tribute to Rufus P. Ranney, the venerable and eminent lawyer.

An Unauthorized Publication.
He then concluded his response in these words:

"Before I conclude, there is one statement that I feel it my duty to make. In one of our town papers, a few days ago, I saw my name as that of a proper candidate for the presidency or vice presidency in 1900. I regretted very much to see the suggestion, for appearing in a paper known to be very friendly to me and published in the place of my residence, it might naturally be suspected by strangers that it was inspired, or at least approved by me. But as it was not the fact, I had no idea that such a suggestion would be made until I saw it in this paper.

A Patriotic Renunciation.
My friends, let me say to you in all sincerity and without the least mental reservation, that I am not nor shall I ever again be a candidate for office. I have been sufficiently honored by my party and nation and do not desire any further honor than continued friendship and good will. Gentlemen, I have said enough, more, indeed, than I expected to say.
Once more, let me return you my sincerest thanks. You have gladdened the heart and brightened the footsteps of an old man, your devoted friend, in his descent of the hill of life when he has almost reached its foot. May God bless you all in his earnest prayer.

How It Was Received.
The effect of these words on the banqueters was electric. At first there was intense silence for a moment, and then the audience, no longer able to restrain itself, burst forth as one man, napkins were waved, and there went forth cheer after cheer which might have been heard, like the reverberation of cannon, for many blocks away. Every man present felt that he had lost a comrade in the political battle, and the cheer was a parting demonstration, as well as a protest against inexorable time, who had thus stricken down one of the heroes of Democracy.

Ex-President Cleveland's Speech.
The announcement of the next toast, "Citizenship in America," and the presentation of ex-President Cleveland to respond was the signal for another outburst of enthusiasm. Mr. Cleveland said:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN:—I follow the promptings of a heart full of devotion and devotion, as I tender from the Democracy of the great state of New York, her tribute of affection for the man whom we honor to-night.

I am commissioned to claim for my state her full share of the glory which has been shed upon the American name and character, by one whose care and example can not be pre-empted and whose renown can not be limited in ownership to the neighbors and friends of any locality. We contest every exclusive pre-tension to his fame and greatness, because he is a neighbor to all the people of the land; because he is the friend of all who love their country; because his career splendidly illustrates the best and strongest elements of our national character; and because his example belongs to all his countrymen.

Our American Citizenship.
The speaker then paid a tribute to American citizenship and declared that he should be profoundly grateful that the elements thereof are so naturally related to our situation and so simple. The influences which have made our people the safe depository of governmental power, he said, had their source in the American home.

Not Ashamed of Cheap Goods.
He then said that the Democratic party would remain unalterably attached to the plain and frugal people. It was not disturbed by the saying that "cheap and nasty go together and this whole system of cheap things is a badge of poverty," but indignantly repudiates such an interpretation of American sentiment. What brought out these condemnations of cheapness? It was hard to speak patiently in answer to this line of argument. The people had been filled with hate and sectional prejudice; been cajoled with misrepresentations and false promises, and finally betrayed; but they had at last aroused and demanded an explanation.
They had demanded redemption of party pledges and clamored for cheapness that their families might have the comforts and necessities of life.

A Double Celebration.
After some more comments on the issues of the day Mr. Cleveland went on as follows:
Nothing could so well accompany the honors we pay our distinguished guest as the celebration of his birthday of victory, which has just been achieved in vindication of American citizenship—for in him we honor the man who has best illustrated true American manhood. Our rejoicing and his are increased, as we also celebrate to-night the triumph of a Democratic principle for which he fought and fell but two years ago, and to complete our joy and his we are permitted to indulge in true Democratic enthusiasm over the steadfastness and devotion to its creed exhibited by our party, which knowing no discouragement has fought to victory in the people's cause.

Conscience and Judgment.
Who can now doubt our countrymen's appreciation of that trait, so well illustrated in the character of Allen G. Thurman, which prompted him throughout his long career, at all times and in all circumstances, and without regard to personal consequences, to do the things which his conscience and judgment approved, and which always led him to the interests of his country and in accordance with his Democratic faith? Who can now doubt that conscience and courage point out the way to public duty?

Future Responsibilities.
If we entertain more solemn thoughts on this occasion, let them be concerning the responsibility which awaits us as our fellow-countrymen place in our keeping their hopes and their trust. We shall find in our obligation to them if we settle conscience and duty by ignoble partisanship; but we shall meet every patriotic expectation if, in all we do, we follow the guidance of true and honest Democracy, illuminated by the light of genuine American citizenship.

Gen. Thomas Ewing's Remarks.
The next toast was responded to by Gen. Thomas Ewing. His speech dealt with the means of raising national revenue. After a brief tribute to the guest of the evening and some references to the resources of the country, he said that the national revenue should be raised by taxing the wealthy, and not the common people. To put the enormous burden on the wealth instead of the labor of the country was to wrong no man, check no industry, but to insure a just distribution of the annual net increase which labor and capital combined produced.

Taxes To Be Reduced.
The tariff on salt and sugar and the internal tax on tobacco should be utterly abolished. A rational tariff policy was demanded. McKinley's bill was protection run mad. The Democracy did not advocate free trade, but indirect help to weak industries. The federal income and inheritance taxes, repealed by the Republicans, would be, he believed, restored by the Democracy. They ought to be levied.
The states must check the phenomenal growth of wealth. Gas should be made by the cities, not by private corporations, and there were other ways by which the accumulations of corporations could be reduced.

Democracy for the People.
The Democratic party was formed by and for the people. It believes in their ability and their divine right to rule. It is not a seeker of political nostrums, but is not afraid to combat new evils by use of legitimate powers of government. The hatreds and prejudices which grew out of the war have long blinded the people to the infidelity of the Republican party to their interests. But the awakening has come at last; and from every quarter of the heavens we yet hear the reverberations of that thunder which, on Nov. 4, rolled from the White Mountains to the Sierras.

Concluding Remarks.
Gen. Ewing closed as follows: It is the people's answer to Mr. Reed's threat that the Republican party would do the voting, counting, and returning. It is their answer to Mr. McKinley's denunciation of the demand for cheap goods. It is their rebuttal of the spokesman who has seats in cabinets and forget that there is a God in Israel. It is the answer to Mr. Blaine's assertion that South Bend that the people of the United States want more protection. He can now gracefully withdraw his quasi-support of the McKinley act on the ground that he misunderstood the people.

Fellow Democrats. The stupendous victory we now rejoice over was won, not by our wisdom, but by the reckless and unreasoning violence of our adversaries. May we hold and extend our victory by good sense and moderation.

Other Sentiments.
Other toasts were responded to by Senator McDonald, Gen. Thomas Ewing, Hon.
W. C. P. Breckinridge and Hon. Don M.
Dickinson, and the speaking was still in progress at midnight. The absence of Henry Watterson, who was to have responded to a toast, was due to the fact that the theme he selected conflicted with the one assigned Mr. Dickinson. He therefore withdrew his acceptance.

A retail dealer recently complained to the writer that he was always "hard up," although doing a good business and getting the usual profit without any unusual expense. It was suggested that possibly the explanation might be found in the accumulation of old stock. He took the hint and has since been engaged in working off what is apparently the accumulation of years, at cost prices.
Now let it be understood that we are not running off any old stock; but we took a peep at our Overcoat stock and we find that we are badly overstocked, and as our motto is to never let stock accumulate we have run our knife deep in the prices, and to be determined in our efforts "we shall and will unload at all hazards."

The season being advanced, and the topic of the day, "Shall I buy an overcoat or wait," seems to be the prevailing question. See our prices and be convinced that the time is at hand.

Wisconsin's Election May Be Declared Invalid

AND ALL THE TROUBLE IN VAIN.

A Section of the Cooper Law Believed To Be in Violation of the Constitution, Because It Practically Makes an Educational Qualification—An Order for Liberal Construction That Doesn't Seem to Have Helped Matters.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 14.—It is believed by many that if the legality of the recent state election was questioned in court the entire proceedings would be set down as unconstitutional, and therefore void. The Cooper law has one clause which is believed especially to violate the constitution of the state. It is section 29, which reads as follows:

In Case of Physical Disability.
"Any voter who declares under oath to the presiding officer of election that 'by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, shall, upon request, have the assistance of one or two of the election officers in the marking thereof, and such officer or officers shall thereafter give no information regarding the same. The presiding officer of election is hereby qualified to administer such oath, and any elector who swears falsely as to such disability shall be deemed guilty of perjury."

Where the Shoe Pinches.
If this section be strictly construed no man would be entitled to assistance in marking his ballot unless he was blind or crippled. This would disfranchise a person who could not read his ballot, and thus violate the provisions of article 3 of the state constitution, which gives every male person 21 years of age and over a right to vote unless he be under guardianship, "non compos mentis," or not restored to civil rights after conviction of treason or felony.

Didn't Save the Law.
Section 29 of the Cooper law was ordered to be so liberally construed that physical disability would include inability to read and write, removing what would otherwise make an educational qualification for voters. This liberal construction is said to have been ordered to save the constitutionality of the law, but it is claimed by some that if the legality of the election was carried to the supreme court on a test case there is great probability that the court would set the election aside as void, thus compelling the present state officers to hold over until a new election was had and the result determined.

The United States government is constructing a harbor at the mouth of the Chicago, by cutting a wide and deep channel through a sand bar at its mouth, and constructing piers to extend into the lake beyond the action of the winds and waves upon the bar. $25,000 were expended last year for this purpose, and the present congress has appropriated an additional sum of $32,801, which, added to the previous appropriation, makes the sum of the original estimate.

Then the Gazetteer goes on to praise the facilities for building a harbor; speaks of the prairie "back of the town;" the timber along the North Branch; adding that "The United States government owns a strip of elevated ground between the town and lake, about half a mile in width, on which Fort Dearborn and the light house are situated. Here are stationed about one hundred United States troops, including officers, as a check upon the Indians in the adjacent territory."

It appears odd to read about Chicago being located "From one-half mile to a mile from the Lake Michigan" now in these days when it is proposed to fill up the lake for streets and buildings so crowded for room are the great masses of inhabitants.
